The Voelkels' first novel in the Jaguar Stones series, Middleworld (2007), introduced 14-year-old Max Murphy, the only child of world-famous archaeologists. (These are just the kind of work-obsessed parents prone to taking a kid into a tomb and then forgetting all about him that an adventuring kid needs.)

Great book to round out the series that shows the hunt for the finish to finding the Jaguar Stones. This book, like the rest, contains pictures. It also is full of wonderful adjectives and verbs that students can begin to learn when they read stories like this for the first time. Although the series is fiction, it is full of Maya myths that can become a great discussion for class. flag Like

The End of the World Club is the second book in the Young Adult Jaguar Stones trilogy. Max is back in Boston living with his parents, but things are anything but normal. Boston is in the middle of the longest dry spell in years but the Murphy household has had non-stop pouring rain for weeks. A tropical jungle seems to be growing in their house with real flora and fauna from San Xavier (the
